MANUEL VALLS FORMER PRIME MINISTER OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY DOES NOT FULFIL THE INVESTITURE CONDITIONS

Former Socialist Prime Minister Manuel Valls does not fulfil the conditions for an inauguration of the legislative elections, Jean-Paul Delevoye, chairman of the investiture commission of the French Republic, said on Wednesday.

"To date, he is not in the criteria of acceptance of his application for investiture," declared Jean-Paul Delevoye on Europe 1. "And so in this very specific case, the National Commission of Investiture can not analyze the candidacy of Mr. Valls," he added, adding that there would be "also political reading".

Manuel Valls, announced three days ago, join the movement "En Marche" of Emmanuel Macron new president of the republic, without even having informed him himself, President of his movement "En Marche" ...

The Newly elected President of the French Republic, Emmanuel Macron resigned immediately after his official declaration by the Council of State.

A CLEAR ANIMOSITY BETWEEN MANUEL VALLS DUE TO THE SUCCESS OF EMMANUEL MACRON

From the time when Manuel Valls was Prime Minister and Emmanuel Macron was the Minister of Economy in 2014, he often scorned him at the National Assembly by naming him clear between the two men. For good reason, the young minister of the economy who had successfully led, despite the many obstacles of the slingers, his bill "For growth and activity" which was validated and voted "Loi Macron".-----

Minister Macron had at the time aroused much popularity of media and French citizens and was in pole position politics because of brilliant decisions in the implementation of his law that labelled "Macron Law"[2].

Compared to his prime minister, Valls, Emmanuel Macron took little steps towards the increasing adherence of the French due to his pragmatic and effective actions and promises. The rivalry had then settled, following the political success and the empathy of the French people. Moreover, the unpopularity of Manuel Valls, that reached so high levels, played in favour of Emmanuel Macron who represented "The one who held him head and faced him, even if he was younger than him, politically speaking." It is always the case, and the fact that Manuel Valls seeks to join Emmanuel Macron, knowing that he was running against him during the primary to be candidate to the presidential, doesn't explain everything. Indeed, he lost that primary elections, facing Benoit Hamon, indicates that his unpopularity remained as strong on the part of the French voters who rejected him at that primary election.

EMMANUEL MACRON HAS PROMISED A MORALIZATION OF POLITICAL ARENA-----

Emmanuel Macron promised during his presidency ceremony that he would apply the "Moralisation of the political arena since the affairs during the campaign (Marine Le Pen and Francois Fillon, presumes guilty of fictitious jobs, for positions of assistant speaker)"[2]. That multiplication of revelations of affairs have ruined the atmosphere of the presidential campaign, and deceived the French People.-----

Not to increase "passes right" or privilege to Manuel Valls, just because he was Prime Minister: is consistent with this election promise and can help to reconcile the French people, who are over-tired of these privileges granted on behalf of the political arrangements ... The "En Marche" movement, recently renamed "La République En Marche", promised Manuel Valls not to oppose him a candidate of their party in his district of Evry, (He was mayor of Evry from 2001 to 2012). Anyway, the former Prime Minister Valls, will find himself facing other candidates of "Front National", "Les Republicains", and "Les Insoumis" by Jean Luc Melenchon, who are still very active.-----

On the other hand, Manuel Valls is now in a delicate position vis-À-vis his own party, the Socialist Party, with his provocation and that aroused their anger. Indeed, this spontaneous and unexpected reversal, entailed, that the Socialist Party initiates a "Procedure of exclusion of the PS". Following his intention to appear under the label of the "Republique En Marche" [2], the first secretary of the Socialist Party Jean-Christophe Cambadélis, announced that an exclusionary procedure had been launched against former Prime Minister Minister Manuel Valls. "A procedure is in progress. Manuel Valls is referred to the Conflicts Committee," said the head of the PS on Radio, BeurFM. "In the Socialist Party, it's not like the Front National, En Marche! Or to insubordinate France: it is not the chief who decides to exclude. There are procedures," adds Cambadélis.
