Two years later, the subject is more relevant than ever as the climate emergency is a major concern for all and the Energy and Climate Act sets the ambitious goal of carbon neutrality by 2050. "Everyone sees the ecological benefits" but the investment in the work "remains a brake", according to a report established in 2018 by ORPI. "On the sellers side, improving a good from which they separate no longer makes sense, on the contrary, undertaking energy renovation works represents an additional cost for the buyers, when the budget of the acquisition has already been decided".-----

Arnaud Leroy, President of the ADEME, as for him, explains that « The major actors will end up their role of enta with complementarity and especially the entire training given by ADEME and millions of housing are concerned, and this site is dynamic and rave to work in regions, with ADEME, and I hope we will succeed in convincing. Our role of trainer and diversifier to rectify and accompany the entire profession. We must seize this time range to get out of the anecdotal and do major global works for the comfort and energy saving and the stakes on the climatic aspect »-----
